EKISTICS (modern Greek: ΟΙΚΙΣΤΙΚΗ) is derived from the ancient Greek adjective οικιστικός, more particularly from the neuter plural οικιστικά (as “physics” is derived from φυσικά, Aristotle). The ancient Greek adjective οικιστικός meant: “concerning the foundation of a house, a habitation, a city or a colony; contributing to the settling.” It was derived from the noun οικιστής, meaning “the person who installs settlers in a place.” This may be regarded as deriving indirectly from another ancient Greek noun, οἰκίσις, meaning “building,” “housing,” “habitation,” and especially “establishment of a colony, a settlement or a town” (already in Plato), or “filling it with new settlers”: “settling,” “being settled.” All these words grew from the verb οικίζω, “to settle,” and were ultimately derived from the noun οἶκος, “house,” “home” or “habitat.”

The Shorter Oxford English Dictionary contains a reference to an oecist, oekist or oikist, defining him as: “the founder of an ancient Greek ... colony.” The English equivalent of οικιστική is ekistics (a noun). In addition, the adjectives ekistic and ekistical, the adverb ekistically, and the noun ekistician are now also in current use. The French equivalent is ékistique, the German ökistik, the Italian echistica (all feminine).
